

Upstart Crows!

One thing this poor preacher learned years ago was that people do not mind being rascals. They just do not like to have it pointed out.

People do not mind twisting and turning the Bible to fit their own agenda. They don't mind seeking to impose their own private interpretations on others. They do not mind acting as lord's over the inheritance of Christ. What they do mind is for someone to point it out.

Why not just be pagan and be done with it? Why dress your paganism up in Christian clothing, and pretend to be something you are not? Why pretend the Bible says what it does not say? Why say that Jesus taught the divinity of mankind or that He found good in all men? Why make up stuff?

A contemporary once complained that Shakespeare was an "upstart crow, beautified with our feathers." Such are pagan theologians who dress themselves with the feathers of Christ. Shame, shame, shame!
